Fine Silk Shawls at Mrs. Stine's

Mr. Patsy Bowler of Hawthorne, is in the city.

Read the holiday advertisements in this issue.

State Treasurer elect Egan was in the city yesterday.

The snow in Washoe valley is nearly 10 inches deep.

R. K. Colcord, Governor-elect is spending a few days in Carson.

The Indians and whites had a skirmish in South Dakota yesterday.

Mrs. Le Moynes entertained a large and highly pleased audience at Odd Fellows' Hall last night.

Sheriff elect Botsford has appointed Pete Taylor as Deputy Sheriff. It is everywhere regarded as an excellent appointment.

Carefully scan the advertisement of Burlington the shoe man, in today's issue. You can't walk through the winter without his shoes.

A private letter from Indiana says: "The Australian system of voting is a daisy, and everybody is pleased with it except floaters and bootlers."

Parties who are interested in securing a fine line of Christmas goods will lose nothing by reading George Thaxter's advertisement. The stock needs no comment.

Arthur McEwen, who was examined in San Jose on Saturday, charged with libeling Judge Fox, has been held over to appear before the Grand Jury with bail fixed at $500.

All a Mistake.

Sol Hilp, the well known Ely merchant, visited Carson yesterday. Coming up on the train he got into a queer scrape in the sleeper. He had an upper berth, and the man behind him could not find his underclothes, and finally, as Hilp slid out of the upper berth the underclothes came tumbling down along with a watch and hat. The man jumped out of his berth and grabbed Hilp, denouncing him as a thief and calling for a porter.

The porter, when he reached the scene, said that he had put the things in the upper berth himself, a few hours before.

It appears they had fallen out of the lower berth in the night, and the porter supposing they belonged to Hilp, placed them in his berth.

The editor of the APPEAL was on the same train and vouched for Hilp being a respectable White Pine merchant and liberal advertiser.

The man who had charged Hilp with stealing his things, apologized and treated to several bottles of beer, and the trouble was ended.

Dick Mills' Funeral.

The funeral of Richard Mills took place on Sunday from the Episcopal Church. The Rev. F. Holmes officiated, and preached a touching discourse.

The choir, consisting of Mrs. Bender, Miss Vallie French and Messrs. Cobb and Torreyson, with J. P. Meder, organist, rendered appropriate music. The coffin was covered with floral tributes, and bore also the fire cap and belt which Dick was proud to wear in his life time. Two members from each fire company made up the pall bearers.

Despite the muddy condition of the streets, the Curry Fire Company, of which deceased was a member, and the Warrens turned out in large numbers. The Swift Engine Company was also represented, and a long line of carriages followed the hearse to the grave.

The deceased has been one of the oldest firemen in this city, and spent the best years of his life assisting in protecting the property of his fellow citizens.

Dr. Billings Dead.

Word was received yesterday that Dr. Billings, a dentist, formerly of this city, died in California. The cause of his death could not be learned.

A HINT TO NEVADA CAPITAL.

Place Suggested for a Nevada Academy of Sciences.

Arthur McEwen, in a letter to the Oakland Enquirer, makes a suggestion which the rich men of Nevada ought to pay some attention to. He says:

The fine building of the California Academy of Sciences, which owes its existence to the munificence of James Lick, rises nobly on Market street. When the Academy shall feel itself perfectly at home there, let us trust that it will do something which may fully justify its existence. Our men of science, in and out of the Academy, are about the laziest on earth, I think. Dan de Quille, the Comstock newspaper man, had an article in last Sunday's Chronicle on the geological and archeological wonders of Nevada that almost anywhere else would have stirred up the local scientific world; but what California scientists read in newspapers they give no attention to. A dozen years or so ago I saw for the first time on the floor of the quarry at Carson penitentiary the footprints preserved in stone of what appeared to be giants. They were as human in form as my own foot could make, though in size my shoe placed in one was as a baby's to a laborer's brogan. There were the tracks of animals too, from the elephant's to the wolf's. Fossil tusks and bones had been dug up at various times during the preceding fifteen years. One complete great tusk had been presented by Lieutenant Governor Slingerland, when he was Warden, to the landlord of the Ormsby House. It hung behind the bar as an ornament till it crumbled to dust.

I wrote privately of these things to one of the foremost scientists of California—of things that the press of Nevada had wearied of telling. The gentleman—a personal friend, and a man of great learning, who had published many scientific books—replied that he had seen frequent mention of the footprints and fossils, but had regarded the tales as "mere newspaper stories." He and others visited the place, took casts of the footprints, and then the Academy of Sciences had a great row over them, some holding that they were human and others contending that they were more probably made by a monster sloth. There so far as I know, the whole matter has rested to this day. Had the find occurred in Europe the world would have been shaken with the news, and it would have ranked in importance with the Neanderthal man and the Catavrus skull—perhaps far exceeded them, for nobody knows what further mysteries are hidden under that sandstone hill which walls the prison yard. Had we with us one man of the Huxley or Tyndall type that hill would have belonged to Science long ago, and every secret been wrested from it. Specialists from all quarters of the globe would have flocked to the excavations and the geology of the region—which yet bubbles with hot springs and mineral veins in process of formation—would have become as the A, B, C's of knowledge. But the hill is there yet, the colossal footprints are beaten by the wind and weather, while our scientists snooze at Berkeley or quarrel like cats over nothing in particular at the Academy. Mackey, Fair, Jones, or some other man who has drawn his millions from Nevada, should buy that hill and hold it against the time when some man of science, who is not content to learn everything from what other men have written, shall arise among us. John Muir, while herding sheep or guiding tourists in the Yosemite, discovered the secret of the Valley's being and gave it to the world. For this contribution to the proofs of the correctness of the glacial theory he won a lasting reputation. There is fame awaiting trained brains in the deserts and mountains of the Pacific Coast. As for Carson it is only 12 hour's ride in a sleeping car from the snoring Academy of science on Market Street.

No Legal Objection.

CARSON, Dec. 6, 1890.

EDITOR CARSON APPEAL:—As your paper is generally right in advocating morality, what do you think of the social dance give at the house known as the Palace in the lower part of town by several of our leading society young men on Thursday night last, and a grand spread being given, and the turkey carved by the landlady of the house until dawn of day?

ONE WHO KNOWS EVERY GENTLEMAN THERE.

[Our idea is that a landlady who would take all night to carve a turkey and not get through till morning, don't know the first elements of carving. An invitation to eat at such a place would be refused by us, as such carving is too slow. In the President's Thanksgiving proclamation he called on all classes of society to stand in and observe the day, and in this view he was fully endorsed by Acting Governor Bell. A dinner that has the approval of the President of the United States and the Acting Governor of Nevada, seems to have no legal objection in its way. As long as the landlady of the Palace don't attempt to carve turkey in your house, you have no special grievance. We refer your communication for further deliberation to the moral papers of Reno.—ED. APPEAL.]

The lady will confer a favor by sending the names to this office.

A Chronograph.

Chas. Friend has received a chronograph as a gift from Senator Jones to the Meteorological Observatory. It is a very delicate machine for measuring intervals of time, and cannot be easily described so that a non-scientific person could understand it. It is used in recording the course of the stars, and is also a perfectly accurate timer for horse races.

Card of Thanks.

The widow and family of the late Richard Mills, desire to return thanks to their many friends for the sympathy and assistance extended during their hour of bereavement. Their kindly acts will ever be held in grateful remembrance by the widow and fatherless.

MRS. KATE MILLS.

For Poor Children.

Wouldn't it be a good idea for the people of Carson, to raise a fund and make a collection of dolls and toys for poor children in Ormsby county? The APPEAL will take charge of contributions left at this office.
